REENTRY BEGINS AT INCARCERATION™

Building the Path Home Before Release

A practical, accountable framework for beginning reentry preparation during incarceration and carrying it through release into long-term community stability.

ABOUT MALIK

Malik Al-Malaki II is President and Chief Executive Officer of Vast Global International, Inc. and Executive Director of Vast Reentry Services, Ltd. Drawing on firsthand understanding of justice involvement and reentry, he advances accountable preparation, applied skills, workforce readiness, digital access, and institutional-to-community continuity.

SIGNATURE KEYNOTE

Reentry Begins at Incarceration™ challenges institutions and communities to treat release as a transition point, not the starting line. Malik presents a disciplined model that connects accountability, personal development, employability, digital readiness, relationships, and structured community support.

AUDIENCE OUTCOMES

- Understand why credible reentry planning should begin during incarceration.
- Identify the preparation gaps that undermine stability after release.
- Apply a practical continuum from institutional preparation to community participation.
- Balance personal accountability with opportunity, support, and measurable expectations.
- Translate reentry principles into program, workforce, supervision, and partnership decisions.
